CLOSING REMARKS
Alex Mills, Associate Dean, Students
EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING AWARDS

PRESENTED TO:

Junior Tenure Stream Faculty
James Elwick
Department of Science & Technology Studies

Professor Elwick is an exceptionally worthy candidate for this award. If there’s one over-arching theme from student commentaries about his teaching it is “creative engagement” - and this refers to both his own engagement and to that of his students. Games, challenges, activities, and discussions are interspersed among fascinating lecturing. Professor Elwick brings out the best in his students, making shy ones feel comfortable, and making those with different opinions feel welcome all the same. His efforts and gifts yield great pay-offs for York students: he teaches “in such a way as to make students fall in love with the topics, just as he loves those topics.”

Non Tenure Stream Faculty
Daniela Monaldi
Department of Science & Technology Studies

Richard Jarrell Award of Excellence for Teaching Assistants
Harjot Singh Deol
Department of Biology

Mr. Deol has become a favourite TA among undergraduate students in Biology and Natural Science courses. One nominator who had the good fortune of having Mr. Deol as her TA indicated he “created an environment in which learning was joyous and engaging.” Another student said something similar: his “love for teaching radiates enthusiasm and a joy for learning.” Others referred to him and his teaching as kind, fair, patient, amazing, and approachable. Not only is the process of learning from him clearly enjoyable, the outcomes are there to show it pays off. One professor observed: “Harjot’s students often mention that they have acquired a deeper understanding of lab material under his guidance.”

Richard Jarrell Award of Excellence for Teaching Assistants
Mohamed Salem
Department of Biology

Mr. Salem’s nomination file was a pleasure to read, although there were so many letters of support it took a while! Phenomenal, organized, passionate, positive, and calm were among the adjectives used to describe his teaching. And how about this student comment as a strong endorsement: “the most inspirational person I have met in my life.” Repeatedly, students indicated to the adjudication panel that Mohamed goes above and beyond in the fulfillment of his teaching duties. His approach is universally appreciated by the professors who work with him for the entirely positive feedback students give and for his unceasing good humour, and his commitment and preparedness.
EXCELLENCE IN RESEARCH AWARDS

PRESENTED TO:

Early Career Research Award
Derek Wilson
Department of Chemistry

Professor Derek Wilson has established a thriving research program at York University focused on the relationship between the conformational motions of proteins in solution and their biological activity at York University. Professor Wilson has demonstrated strong leadership ability serving as the director for the Centre for Research in Mass Spectrometry and special advisor to the dean.

"Derek has already emerged as an internationally-recognized scholar of the highest quality who has greatly contributed to training of students and PDFs and is leading knowledge-translation projects of importance to industry and society." – Colleague

Established Research Award
Gary Sweeney
Department of Biology

Professor Gary Sweeney’s innovative research is at the forefront of his field. His program has two major themes that focus on (1) the molecular mechanisms underlying the association of obesity and insulin resistance and (2) the direct effect of hormone-like molecules and other inflammatory markers released by fat cells on cardiovascular disease. Professor Sweeney has been highly successful in attracting continued research funding for his projects and provides strong leadership to a large cohort of students and post-doctoral visitors.

“Professor Sweeney has certainly achieved international distinction through his research and is one of Canada’s research stars in the area of molecular and cellular aspects of diabetes.” – Colleague

Excellence in Graduate Mentorship Award
Arturo Orellana
Department of Chemistry

Professor Arturo Orellana’s research interests span all areas of organic chemistry, including the synthesis of organic molecules from simple, inexpensive and widely available building blocks to medicinal chemistry with leading experts in biology and pharmacology. In addition to his successful research projects and productive collaborations, Professor Orellana has exemplified outstanding commitment to education and training, which will significantly contribute to the next generation of scientist.

“[Prof. Orellana takes] a keen interest in how research activities within his group could position his students for future success, by carefully choosing research projects, guiding students through their degree, helping with scholarships and awards applications, and assisting in transitioning to the workforce.” – Former graduate student
